Deputy Head's Message

October 16, 2009, marked the one-year anniversary of the coming into force of the Specific Claims Tribunal Act creating the Specific Claims Tribunal and the Registry of the Specific Claims Tribunal of Canada.

The Registry's role is to provide services for the efficient and effective administration of the Specific Claims Tribunal, while protecting the Tribunal's independence. In doing so, the Registry seeks to be a national and international leader in the administration of justice.

The Registry has passed many milestones since its inception, including the completion of a Multipurpose Tribunal Room which incorporates many First Nations' cultural symbols in its design and will act as the electronic hub for the administration of Tribunal proceedings.

Additionally, the Registry has developed many of the corporate policies and business plans needed to ensure the effective, transparent, and accountable use of public resources. It has also classified and staffed key positions. The Registry has worked hard to engage and inform key stakeholders on its progress and direction through regular meetings, conferences, information sessions, and open dialogue.

In the year ahead, the Registry will complete foundational work to establish the administrative services needed to support Tribunal activities and ensure transparency, accountability, and fairness in Registry operations.

The Registry will support the Tribunal's development of its rules of practice and procedure and, once the rules have been established, will set up an electronic registry and case management system consistent with the rules.

The Registry will develop and implement strategies to raise awareness of the Tribunal with First Nations, the Government of Canada and the broader Canadian public and to communicate information on rules and processes to parties interested in submitting claims to the Tribunal or participating in Tribunal proceedings.

Activities undertaken over the next year will ensure that the Registry is well placed to deliver on its core mandate of providing administrative services to support the Specific Claims Tribunal in the disposition of specific claims.

Section I: Departmental Overview

❖ Raison d'être and Responsibilities

The Registry is constituted under the Specific Claims Tribunal Act (which came into force on October 16, 2008) to manage the administrative affairs of the Specific Claims Tribunal. The Tribunal is an adjudicative body with the express mandate of deciding First Nations' specific claims including claims related to non-fulfillment of treaties, fraud, illegal leases and dispositions or inadequate compensation for reserve lands or other assets.

The Registry is responsible for managing the processing of claims including: intake and tracking of submitted claims; managing the logistics of proceedings (including scheduling of proceedings); processing warrants, subpoenas, and writs; managing information and records; and providing services to the public in both official languages. These services support the independent resolution of claims fairly, without delay, and with an efficient, effective, and economic application of resources. The Registry must exercise these functions in a manner that protects the administrative and adjudicative independence of the Specific Claims Tribunal. Independence is central to the role of the Specific Claims Tribunal and its ability to resolve claims fairly.

Although the Registry's offices are located in Ottawa, it provides services throughout Canada to Tribunal Members, First Nations, the Crown, and the public. The Registry seeks to be recognized as a national and international model of excellence in the administration of justice for Aboriginal peoples and the Crown.

❖ Strategic Outcome and Program Activity Architecture (PAA)

The sole strategic outcome for the Registry, as approved by Treasury Board, is the efficient administration of the Specific Claims Tribunal of Canada, supported by program activities related to registry services.

The long-term benefit for Canadians will be the efficient and effective resolution of outstanding specific claims, with the potential for increased reconciliation and improved relationships amongst First Nations, the Government of Canada, and the broader Canadian public. The efficient operation of the Tribunal will create value for Canadians by saving costs associated with traditional litigation and negotiations. Monetary awards for successful claimants will provide First Nations with capital that may then be invested in their communities, contributing to the prosperity of First Nations in Canada.

Ongoing	Efficient administration of the Specific Claims Tribunal	The Registry must deliver services despite unforeseen operational disruptions. The recent H1N1 pandemic provides an example of a potential threat to service delivery. The relatively small size of the Registry increases the impact of any operational threat. —Priority will be met by identifying the essential elements of Registry services and contingencies for the continuation of those services, including options to back-fill positions, and conduct operations from locations outside of the Registry’s offices.

❖ Risk Analysis

Operating Environment

The Registry operates in the broader labour market and is subject to many factors that may affect its ability to secure the human resources required to meet its business goals. The Core Public Administration is much older than the workforce in general: over half of the federal public service workforce is 45 years old or over and more than one quarter of the workforce is eligible to retire by 2012. Almost one half of all executives are eligible to retire by 2012.

Pandemics (such as the H1N1 influenza in 2009) and other events may cause service disruptions. Such events pose risks for the Registry due to the small staff complement: a few affected people may have a large impact on the organization’s ability to deliver core services.

The workload of the Tribunal will be affected by decisions and activities of other parties. Claims may be submitted to the Specific Claims Tribunal only after they have been first submitted to the Specific Claims program at Indian and Northern Affairs Canada (INAC) and:

- INAC has informed the First Nation of its decision to not accept the claim for negotiation;

- INAC does not meet the three-year time frame set out in the legislation for assessing claims;
- Three years of negotiation fail to result in a settlement; or
- At any time during negotiations, with the consent of INAC.

It is estimated that there are currently 102 claims that may be eligible for filing at the Tribunal, and a further 608 claims in progress at various stages with INAC. Based on historical settlement rates, this means that there may be 322 cases that will be eligible for Tribunal adjudication. That being said, the onus is on First Nations to file claims with the Tribunal and it is difficult to gauge their intentions at this time.

Risks

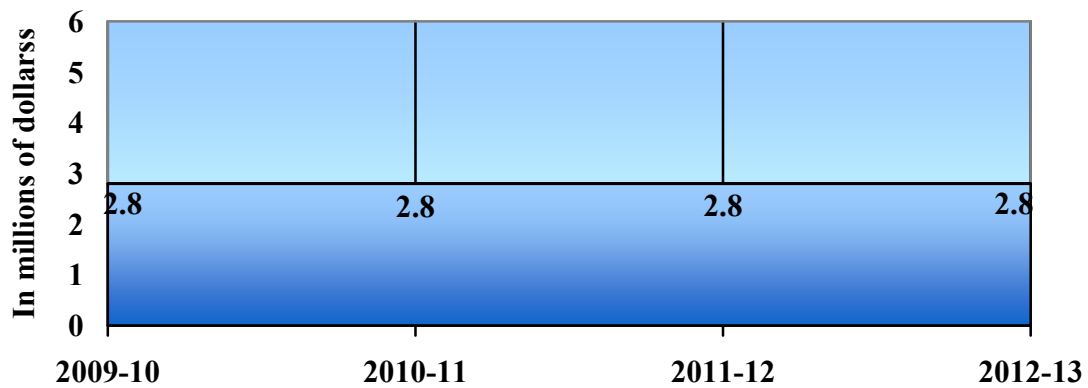

The operational environment of the Registry presents a number of human resources risks that are compounded by the relative size of the Registry. Since the Registry is completing start-up activities – which includes staffing of key positions - labour market influences present challenges to recruiting qualified individuals for positions within the Registry. Further, the lack of depth in the corporate section of the Registry means that the loss of even one employee can result in a significant loss of corporate capacity; sudden departures could lead to gaps in institutional knowledge. The lack of organizational depth means that there are few internal feeder pools that can be used to identify and develop qualified individuals to fill positions on short notice. The smaller complement of Registry staff, coupled with its corporate obligations under the Financial Administration Act and other accountability instruments, could lead to heavier workloads.

The small complement of the Registry also creates risks associated with continuity of operations. A pandemic that infiltrates the Registry can have severe operational consequences even if it affects a small number of people. Additionally, the consolidation of Registry operations in one location creates risks related to the ability of the Registry to continue to deliver services during an emergency.

The final substantive risk that the Registry faces relates to the relative workload associated with claims that have been filed. Although the Registry can compile estimates related to the number of claims that may be brought to the Tribunal, the true number of claims will be dependent on the prerogative of First Nations. Therefore, there is a risk that substantially greater or fewer claims will be brought to the Registry than is anticipated. Additionally, there is no baseline information for an accurate assessment of the resources and time required to process an average claim since the Registry has not been operational. A large volume of claims could result in the use of a large number of resources. Claims volume may lead to the need for direct support for Tribunal Members that has not currently been allocated.

Section II: Analysis of Program Activities by Strategic Outcome

❖ Strategic Outcome

The sole strategic outcome for the Registry, as approved by Treasury Board, is the efficient administration of the Specific Claims Tribunal, which will be supported by activities related to registry services.

❖ Program Activity by Strategic Outcome

The strategic objective will be met through the registry services program activity. When the Tribunal and the Registry are fully operational, registry services will include the intake and processing of claims, scheduling of proceedings, giving notice to parties and affected individuals, records management, provision of information to the public in both official languages, and attending all Tribunal hearings in support of the presiding Tribunal Member.

The program activity described above should result in timely access to the Tribunal across Canada through client service, quality of advice, efficient and timely processing, and unbiased service delivery.

Performance indicators for the foundational work required to be carried out this year in support of the program activity include:

- A Registry that is staffed with qualified individuals capable of providing corporate and registry services in an efficient and effective manner;
- An electronic Registry that utilizes technology to introduce efficiencies and overcome logistical challenges associated with administering a national tribunal; and
- Engagement and outreach enabling clients and the public to have appropriate information and input into Tribunal activities, practices and procedures.

Performance targets include:

- Operational electronic registry and case management system;

- Delivery of sufficient support for the development of rules of practice and procedures, including engagement of stakeholders and identification of best practices;
- Informed and engaged clients, stakeholders and public;
- Completion of Registry staffing processes;
- Delivery of developmental staff training;
- Completion of business continuity and succession plans;
- Creation of student work programs;
- Administration of the Registry within financial allocation; and
- Implemented communications plan.

- Registry succession plan completed by November 2010.

- Case management system with electronic filing and electronic access to the Registry operational by December 2010.
- Quality service standards in place by February 2011.
- Customer service evaluation framework completed by March 2011.

❖ Benefits for Canadians

Canada's Performance Report 2008-2009: The Government of Canada's Contribution – a companion document to the 92 departmental performance reports – is divided into four key areas of policy: economic, social, international, and government affairs. The Registry's strategic outcome is aligned with Social Affairs: A Vibrant Canadian Culture and Heritage.

The long-term benefit for Canadians will be the efficient and effective resolution of outstanding specific claims across Canada, some of which currently provide the impetus for disputes causing financial and psychological impact on Canadians. Efficient operation of the Tribunal will create value for Canadians by saving costs associated with traditional litigation, conflicts, and lengthy negotiations.

Resolution of specific claims through the Specific Claims Tribunal will also remove barriers to reconciliation among First Nations, other Canadians, and the Government of Canada. Monetary awards will provide opportunities for successful First Nations to access capital that may then be invested in their communities, contributing to the prosperity of First Nations peoples.

Program Activities Summary

Activities of the Registry over the next year will be organized with reference to the three broad performance indicators identified on page 7.

1) Human Resources

The Registry is currently developing work descriptions that will allow it to effectively and efficiently classify and staff positions. Registry Officers will be the Registry employees directly responsible for ongoing claims management, ensuring a high level of service to clients and the public.

Human resource considerations will be incorporated into business continuity plans to ensure that services can be maintained during adversity; that there is a skilled workforce with the competencies, information and training needed to perform their work; and that there is succession planning to develop qualified individuals to fill vacancies, whether they arise unexpectedly or not. The Registry, as a small organization, will take particular care in the management of human resources. The implementation of performance and developmental plans for employees will allow for clear communication of expectations and monitoring of performance to ensure objectives are attained. Career development strategies and student programs will be used to develop skilled workers for the Registry and support succession planning for the Registry and the broader public service.

2) Electronic Registry

The Registry will develop and implement an electronic registry and case management system to overcome logistical challenges associated with a national tribunal and help ensure timely and efficient registry services. Technology will be utilized to facilitate paperless filing of claims. The electronic filing of claims, submissions, and motions is expected to improve processing times and reduce expenses for all participants. Electronic notice will facilitate rapid communication, allowing participants to receive automatic notification when documents are filed.

The electronic registry and case management system will be integrated with the Registry's overall information and records management system.

3) Engagement and Outreach

The Specific Claims Tribunal Act was developed through collaboration between the Assembly of First Nations and the Government of Canada. The provision of information about the Tribunal and its activities supports transparency and accountability and will highlight results for Canadians. It is also important that information be produced and disseminated to potential users of the Tribunal to ensure that they have the information needed to participate in Tribunal activities effectively.

First Nations and the general public will be informed of progress made by the Registry and the Tribunal through the website. In addition to publishing information on its website, the Registry will develop communication materials (brochures, fact-sheets, news releases and information kits), and attendance at relevant meetings, committees and conferences.
